Portuguese Program

Welcome to the Portuguese Program at the University of Washington!

The Portuguese Program at University of Washington offers many ways to study Portuguese and the cultures of Brazil, East Timor, Portugal and Lusophone Africa: Cape Verde, Mozambique, Angola, Guinea-Bissau, and São Tomé and Príncipe. We offer a Minor in Portuguese Language and Luso-Brazilian Studies in collaboration with the Henry M. Jackson School of International Studies.

Portuguese holds a study abroad program, Afro- and Indigenous Cultures of Brazil: A Contemporary Examination of Racism, during September of 2019 as part of an exploration seminar.

Offering first, second, and third year Portuguese language classes, our language program follows the theoretical and pedagogical guidelines developed by the American Council on the Teaching of Foreign Languages (ACTFL) and the World-Readiness for Language Learning, and the main goals of instruction are as follows:
Communication: Communicate effectively in more than one language.

Cultures: Interact with cultural competence and understanding.

Connections: Connect with other disciplines and acquire information.

Comparisons: Develop insight into the nature of language and culture.

Communities: Participate in multilingual communities at home and around the world.

In our efforts to promote the standards above, we work in partnership with the local community and other educational institutions to provide students with opportunities to connect with Portuguese speakers and to experience the cultures of Portuguese speaking countries. We are currently offering real-time classroom interaction with Brazilian university students through the Teletendem Program and with the local community through the Seattle Portuguese Meetup group.

We also encourage students to take part in events in the Seattle area involving the arts and cultures of Portuguese speaking countries:

- Information on events in the Movimiento Afrolatino Seattle
- Bate-papo conversation groups on Meetup.com
