The Dr. Lisa Sable Brown Endowed Fund provides financial resources to benefit graduate students to study and/or conduct research about human rights. In 2016, we anticipate having approximately $2200 available to distribute; the entire amount may be issued in a single award or split between multiple awardees. The number of awards and amounts will vary depending on the number and quality of applications. The committee may combine this fellowship with the Mack and Mayerfeld fellowship to make a more substantial award. Priority will be given to graduate student research that identifies acts of oppression of an individual's human rights and advocates abolishing such practices that may be viewed as a form of "slavery."

- Any graduate student who is currently enrolled or will be enrolled in the upcoming academic year is eligible to apply
- This award is open to current and incoming graduate students at all three branches of the University of Washington (Seattle, Bothell, or Tacoma)
- The award could be used towards tuition, research, travel, books, materials, equipment
- US citizenship/permanent resident status is NOT REQUIRED

To be considered, apply via the Henry M. Jackson School of International Studies website:
<https://db.jsis.washington.edu/StudentApplications/> or <http://tinyurl.com/chrfellowships>

You will be asked to provide the following information:

1. Biographic information, status as student status, contact information, GPA, unofficial transcripts, etc.
2. Your CV or Resume with current contact information (phone, address, and email)
3. Proposal that answers the following questions. (approx. 1000 words)
 - a. A description of the research/study and the goals of the travel, if any travel is included
 - b. What experiences do you have (if any) in the field of human rights?
 - c. Outline the purpose of your research/study and its relevance to the study of (or practice of promoting) human rights
4. A detailed budget describing how the funds would be used and, if applicable, how this support would supplement other funds, fellowships, and grants.
5. A letter of recommendation from the student's primary advisor or committee member. (Incoming students may provide letter of recommendation from most recent faculty member who is familiar with the student's work)
6. The names and full contact information (campus address, phone, and email) of two University of Washington (or past non-UW) faculty members who are familiar with your work.

If you have any questions about the application process, please do not hesitate to contact us.
